Marc J. Epstein : Advances in Management Accounting: 23 before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Advances in Management Accounting: 23:

Advances in Management Accounting publishes well-developed articles on a variety of current topics in management accounting that are relevant to researchers in both practice and academe. As one of the premier management accounting research journals, Advances in Management Accounting is well poised to meet the needs of management accounting scholars. Volume 23 of Advances in Management Accounting features articles on: The Sociological Approaches of Organizational Learning and Applications to Process Innovations of Management Accounting Systems; How Framed Information and Justification Impact Capital Budgeting Decisions; Procedural Justice and Information Sharing During The Budgeting Process; and The Impact of Production Variance Presentation Format on Employees' Decisions.

In this volume, business specialists from North America, Europe, and Australia contribute nine chapters on management accounting. They discuss sociological approaches to organizational learning, focusing on applications to understand why management accounting innovations succeed or fail; citations in Google Scholar to the first 20 volumes of the journal to identify the top authors, faculties, and doctoral programs; drivers of management control systems change; procedural justice and information sharing during the budgeting process; the impact of activity-based costing with competitive strategies on firm performance; the effect of production variance presentation formats on employee decision making; the impact of information and justification on capital budgeting decisions; indirect tooling costs and production orders; and the traceability of time consumption for costing service transactions.
