From Asian Development Bank : Three Decades of Development Partnership: Royal Government of Bhutan and ADB before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Three Decades of Development Partnership: Royal Government of Bhutan and ADB:

Bhutan became a member of the Asian Development Bank (ADB) in 1982, and today ADB is the largest multilateral development partner of the country. As of 31 December 2013, ADB has provided $486.29 million in loans and grants and $54.09 million in technical assistance. More than two-thirds of ADB's assistance has been directed toward the energy, transport, and urban development sectors. ADB remains committed to assisting Bhutan in achieving inclusive and environmentally sustainable growth.
